INTRODUCTION

The role of the United States as a super power country is very important determine global political order. As a country with resources which is very large and capable has made the United States a country a country that has a very big role. What is the role of

The United States policy in international relations is certainly very decisive the future of the world. It cannot be denied The United States of America economic strength as a destination for imports and exports has made this country present as a country that has a very big role in determining global political arena.

Global public policy that occurs in the world in this era of globalization, the main actor is the United States. As a country that becomes as a center of United Nations and also various other international institutions, The United States is very mobile in international relations. United States of America Of course it has a very big interest in international relations making the future of globalization more interesting to study, in particular again regarding global public policy.

In the logic of international relations all nations will certainly seek respective advantages. Placement of a country's diplomats in the country others, of course, to safeguard their interests in the country. Even if it's deep, we often see international relations, we often hear constructive taglines honest cooperation based on mutual interests. That's the norm with its value in building bilateral and multilateral is certainly valid. But deep in practice, how to safeguard the national interests of a nation will be priority scale.

The United States is a very strong country economy, technology, military will of course continue to make various efforts to ensure that its sole influence is safe. It's natural that currently there is a trade war going on psychologically we really understand why between China and the United States at this time there is tension and relations are always tense which makes nations in the world is very anxious because of the trade war between these two giant countries. What will the future hold with developments in terms of global public policy is a very basic question. Through this

DISCUSSION

Talking about public policy today, the term policy is indeed more often used in the context of actions or activities that carried out by actors and government institutions, as well as state behavior in general (United Nation, 1975; Nevil Johnson, 1980). In that regard, it is easy to understand if the policy concept then often has connotations, as well brings political consequences, this is where it is given meaning as political actions. The meaning of policy as we do. This statement will become clearer if we follow the view of a scientist Carl Friedrich's politics, when he stated that policy was a actions that lead to goals proposed by a person, group, o government in a particular environment in connection with the presence of certain obstacles while looking for opportunities to achieve goals or realize the desired goals.

What Frederich has just stated above will become even clearer If we emphasize again the opinion of Knoepfel and friends (2007) when they define the policy as: "A series of decisions pr activities resulting from structured and recurring interactions between different actors, both public and private, who are involved in various different ways in emergence, identification and resolution of problems defined politics as a public one" (a series of decisions or actions as a result of structured and repeated interactions between various actors, both public/government and private/private are involved in various ways responding, identifying, and solving a political problem defined as a public problem).

If the concepts proposed by Frederich and Knoepfel and If we look closely at these friends, we will gain an new understanding as follows:

- a. That is the focus of our attention when studying public policy analysis more about what the government actually does, and not just on what one actually thinks or wants to do.
- b. We must clearly distinguish between policy and decision (decision), where the first term contains the meaning of existence a choice among a number of (perceived) available alternatives.
- c. If we examine all policies, they are normatively problem solving (solution to problem). This means that every policy is actually intended to solve or at least untangle the complexity of public problems, ie collective problems that have been identified and managed to be addressed government agenda (governmental agenda). Thus, policy whatever, borrowing the words of Knoepfel and friends (2007:21) actually reflects the response/responses of the political and administrative system to a social reality, which politically is considered to be no longer possible tolerance.

Smith and Larimer (2009) state "there is not a field of public studies, there are fields-plurals-of public policy studies" (this is not about fields of study regarding public policy, there are multiple fields of policy studies. Based on this perspective, both the content and the context of public policy, will always be in place considered as plural in nature, and therefore (policy issues) is not even an academic inquiry is only of interest to experts in certain scientific disciplines who study or approach it in a monodisciplinary manner. That is also why, for a long time, policy issues have been an arena of struggle for experts from various fields social science disciplines that deliberately orient themselves towards policy oriented) and those who study or research it in an interdisciplinary manner approach).

W.I. Jenkis (1978:15), formulates public policy as a series interrelated decisions taken by a political actor or a group of actors, with regard to chosen goals and methods achieve it in a situation. Those decisions are still in principle is within the limits of the actor's authority.

From the above definition, public policy also concerns what concept it is carried out by the state. Various global public policies have been implemented by the United States is a policy intended for affecting countries in the world. What is the country's public policy?

The future of the United States by President Joe Biden is certainly a gamble in order to create a better global order to grow mutually respectful interaction of countries.

It can not be denied, as a superpower and a supported superpower country by the power of technology, finance and democratic values, it will be related to which leaders in that country are able to display visionary leadership, embracing all country, prioritizing global equality, supporting global justice so that the face of globalization will be more humane. The world must be built on the basis of togetherness and equality with note that all countries in the world must support each other regardless domination politics. Dominance must be removed and replaced with partnership global parallels so that all countries can coexist even with each other the values and culture held are different. What is the future of the world? human? This question is very fundamental and determines the future globally amidst the current extraordinary current of progress.

Hope for change for the better and making the USA Ss a country, being a role model is a representation of diversity (representation of diversity) a nation that must receive recognition. It cannot be denied that United States politics has always been market-oriented (profit). Collaboration is built under various pretexts of partnership equality, human rights, equality of all countries is just the gateway to carry economic interests. This means of profit oriented or the economy interest is always the priority scale. That role can indeed be played because the resources of the American nation are very supportive of that. It means, the Americanization agenda as a hidden agenda is not be denied. Americanizing the world behind economic diplomacy was carried out with various strategies.

Building a harmonious new world order, without intervention, without lust to control (without lust to control), the spirit of respecting sovereignty (respect for sovereignty) of the state is a civilizational value that must be maintained. This means that all countries of the world must join hands peacefully to create harmonious order and relationships based on a spirit of brotherhood global. Thus, global life is peaceful and symbiotic (mutual benefit) can be realized well. The fact that Americanism itself cannot be denied with the slogan "AMERICA number one" is very disturbing.

As we see people's assessments of America as a nation which carries out "expansion" (new style of colonization) has become an "axioma" and must be accepted by all nation states in the world. So, to speak that America has always looked down on third world nations with disdain. America which is supported by the ability to master science and advanced technology that has no "edges" has emerged to become a "super" nation power" and has a very decisive role as world police global policy.

In the midst of the superiority of the American nation, the phenomenon of globalization appears as both an opportunity and a tragedy for (weak) nation states economically and in science and technology) in the world. With the principle "We One The World" has leading the world to become a village (global village), distance and time are still a problem. The law of globalization is usually that the stronger gets stronger capital and human resources) and the weak are getting weaker (weak capital and human resources). Futurist Alvin Toffler in his book "Future Shock" (1970) said, what done on another continent today, has an impact here tomorrow morning. For example, the results of the American presidential election can be instantly seen on FB, Twitter or online media. The paradigm change triggered by globalization is encouraging the development of new civilizations to fill human needs find solutions and alternatives to improve the quality of human life. On when people in third world countries want to find it, America has emerged as an unrivaled power and must submit at their policy. This is the political problem faced by countries nations in the third world. In this context the terms revitalization and reform are often used authorities to identify a process of change towards something appropriate human life is better than before. Alvin Toffler reminds us, that world society is entering the third wave of civilization "The Third Wave", namely post-industrial civilization which is technology, which is one of the characters main current of globalization.

It can be said that today's globalization has brought the trend towards an increasingly strong role of politics and the military in governing dynamics of social life in society. We can see with the naked eye, politics and the American military has emerged as the ever-present sole ruler of the world in every international conflict. In this case, the political principle of "standards" applies double" (double standard), while it is still profitable for America to fight going all out without seeing what is right and what is wrong. In the future, this double standard politics must be eliminated in building new world order, more humane. But we also need to understand the process of globalization of countries developing also needs and must improve its quality. It's never too late to learn and become wise (Better late than never), that's what that must be done by every nation state. As a nation state divided the third world (nation state) which only emerged in the 20th century, questions arise which is very intriguing, what has been done successfully? Remembering the challenges that will be faced will be increasingly large and complex. Complexity of the problem (complex problems) that nation states will face, right? again in a national context, but in a global context. Globalization as the mirror of the 21st century or the third millennium has invited challenges for every nation state in the world.

Apart from that, with the implementation of free markets throughout the world through the WTO flag, it can be ascertained that many nation states let alone unprepared third world countries. The problem now is the situation the economies of third world countries are not yet at a stable level, even third world countries are still struggling with the economic crisis especially after this pass era of the Covid-19 pandemic. We could say countries developing is still in economic transition towards an established level as said by J. Rostow. On the other hand, market enforcement free to open a wave of globalization faucets with various impacts (effects) caused. Market expansion carried out by the state developed tend to exploit the country's natural resources develop. As a result, very large and growing social inequality occurs potential conflict between corporations and local communities in a country because economic activities that do not favor developing countries. Globalization The economy has once again become a boomerang on the country's society developing, including our country today.

CONCLUSION

It is hoped that existing global public policies will become public policies that are capable of creating a new, better world order in its future development. Can The United States of America as a nation can be a channel of blessing for other nations with bringing America as a protecting nation, a protecting nation for all world countries, nations that transmit positive effects (nation that transmits positive effects), a nation that becomes an inspiration, a nation that becomes a role model, so that the future of globalization is more humane in this era of artificial intelligence. Hopefully America can bring it a new global civilization with various policies that are humanist, populist, and global mutual interest orientation based on the values of equality and alignment. Optimism for that must be built which will determine a more humane future of globalization, and not only just bring about Americanization.
